Reverse Painting

The ancient technique of reverse painting on glass creates a stunning effect in which paints and metals seem to retain their liquid origins in flowing fluid swirls of pigment. In this method, clear glass is carefully dipped into pools of wet paints and allowed to dry. Later, a protective layer of gold or white coating is applied to the back. The drips, swirls and splatters of the wet paints are unique, and there are infinite variations of color, tone and pattern.

Gold Leaf Reverse Glass Gilding

The history of reverse gilding on glass dates back over 2000 years. In this time-honored technique, thin sheets of gold foil are applied by hand on the back of the glass in a reverse manner. This method of fixing overlapping sheets of crinkled gold foil to glass results in a richly varied surface generating subtle marks and textures that are not flaws, but essential and desirable aspects of the process. Varying textures add depth and character to each piece while attesting to its handmade one-of-a-kind appeal. A protective coating is applied to the gold foil on the back.
